Things to Consider

- The biggest thing you will need to consider is where are you planning on running your sausage sizzle?
 - There are already venues that run fundraising sausage sizzles such as Bunnings and Officeworks. Often these are very busy and you may have to apply, however they are also very good revenue earners and will often provide you with the necessary basic equipment.
 - Look at your local council's calendar of events – see if there are any upcoming festivals or community days that you may be able to join in with.
- Never underestimate the selling power of sizzling onions – the smell often makes people's mouths water and draws them to your location.
- Depending on your agreement, include other easy items on your menu such as steak sandwiches, burgers or cold drinks. Breakfast BBQ's are often popular too.
- Local butchers and supermarkets may be able to help you with reduced costs on your products.
